Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 19 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Some rain in the northwest, mostly dry elsewhere.

Today:
Fog and low cloud over eastern England will clear through the morning, although some cloud may persist along the coast. Cloudy in the northwest with some rain. Elsewhere, sunny spells, just a small chance of a shower in south-east England.

Tonight:
Cloud and outbreaks of rain moving south-east across much of Northern Ireland and Scotland. Dry with clear periods elsewhere, but mist, fog and low cloud affecting some eastern areas.

Tuesday:
Low cloud and fog clearing, then dry with sunny spells across central and southern UK. Warm by afternoon. Rain in north edging south and easing, sunny spells and showers following.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Mostly fine and dry with sunny or clear spells and mainly light winds. Temperatures a little below average with overnight frosts. Becoming breezy in the southwest.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.